CELA 2024 Annual Conference

St. Louis, Missouri

Theme: Taking Action: Making Change

Landscape architecture plays a vital role in shaping our built environment and addressing the pressing challenges of our time. As the world grapples with issues such as climate change, urbanization, and social inequality, landscape architects are positioned to lead and to contribute, in creating positive, transformative, and resilient change. The conference theme, "Taking Action: Making Change," calls upon landscape architecture educators to meet this challenge and drive meaningful impact.

The Annual CELA 2024 conference, in St. Louis, provides a platform for landscape architecture educators to share inspiring case studies, research findings, and pedagogical approaches that empower educators, students, and communities.

Theme Description:

"Taking Action: Making Change" represents a call to arms for landscape architecture educators to showcase the power of education in research, teaching, and outreach in taking action and making change. By embracing this theme, the conference is a catalyst for change and will shape a more sustainable, equitable, and resilient future through collective efforts.
